The Alfred Dunhill Links Championship is one of the world’s leading golf events. A truly international championship, it is a magnet for golfers from every corner of the world and is one of the most prestigious tournaments on the European Tour.

The championship has a unique format. It incorporates two separate competitions – an individual professional tournament for the world’s leading golfers with a US$5 million prize fund, and a team competition which features some of the most celebrated amateur golfers playing alongside the professionals.

Many of the world’s leading international players such as Ernie Els, Vijay Singh, Retief Goosen and Fred Couples have played regularly in the Championship together with the finest players in Europe. Additionally there is a strong representation of golfers from Southern Africa, Australia and Asia which gives the event a distinctive cosmopolitan feel.

One of the major reasons for the success of the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship is the involvement of amateur golfers, which gives it a much wider interest and appeal. Each year the playing roster includes some of the biggest names from the world of entertainment, sport and business.

Le Bureau will organize after Saturday and Sunday rounds a drop off at the Dunhill Links Championship.

Golf is recorded as having been played at Carnoustie in the early 16th century. In 1890, the 14th Earl of Dalhousie, who owned the land, sold the links to the local authority. It had no funds to acquire the property, and public fundraising was undertaken and donated to the council. The original course was of ten holes, crossing and recrossing the Barry Burn; it was designed by Allan Robertson, assisted by Old Tom Morris, and opened in 1842.[1] The opening of the coastal railway from Dundee to Arbroath in 1838 brought an influx of golfers from as far afield as Edinburgh, anxious to tackle the ancient links. This led to a complete restructuring of the course, extended in 1867 by Old Tom Morris to the 18 holes which had meanwhile become standardized. Two additional courses have since been added: the Burnside Course and the shorter though equally testing Buddon Links. Carnoustie first played host to The Open Championship in 1931, after modifications to the course by James Braid in 1926. The winner then was Tommy Armour, from Edinburgh.
